stated. "Prices are just getting back to where they were before the economic crisis," he added.

Andersen also offered a very interesting perspective on the renovation market.

Where the conventional wisdom says that market may go down due to all the activity brought forward by the Home Renovation Tax Credit, he thinks that activity just primed the pump and now that homeowners have caught the renovation bug, they will just move onto the next project. Sounds plausible to me.

SHOUT-OUTS

The good news is that Ontario builders were part of a British Columbia, Ontario sweep of the recent Canadian Home Builders' Association Sales & Marketing (SAM) awards.

The bad news is that of the eight awards taken by Ontario builders, only two winners hailed from the GTA, but they are both deserving of a shout-out, so hats off to Empire Communities who got the award for Best Brochure/Kit for Fly Condos, besting builders from Victoria, Calgary, Ottawa and Hamilton.

A big tip of the hat to Bachly Construction of Bolton, Ont. who captured the award for Best Single Detached Home (over 4,000 sq. ft.) against heavy competition from Vancouver, Kamloops and Delta, B.C., as well as a place called Quispamiss, N.B.

Last but not least, BILD congratulates former local president Joe Valela of Valmont Homes on his election to the CHBA Executive Board, and Mike Cochren of Oakville-based Cochren Homes (and a RenoMark contractor) on his appointment to that board.

Healthy home makes its debut

A Healthy Home at Downsview Park officially opened its doors to the public. The exhibit, a fresh redesign of popular attraction The Sustainable Condo, showcases eco-friendly technologies available to consumers. It's an example of the modern urban home planned for Downsview Park, where former military and industrial lands are being transformed into a park surrounded by a sustainable community, organizers say.

"We're very excited to partner with industry leaders in sustainability to host the Healthy Home exhibit," said Tony Genco, president and CEO of Downsview Park. "This exhibit provides a unique glimpse into innovative technologies, practices and lifestyle choices that will help raise environmental awareness while contributing to Downsview Park's green future."

A Healthy Home inspires consumers with real-life examples to save energy, limit waste, reduce utility bills, improve indoor air quality and, ultimately, help the environment.

"From energy-efficient home heating equipment to stylish sustainable furniture, this exhibit showcases ways to save money and the environment," said Mark Salerno, District Manager Greater Toronto Area, Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Prior to the redesign, more than 175,000 people toured the model home. Now, with enhanced products, additional partners and a new high-traffic location at Downsview Park's Hangar hosting 750,000 guests per year, the number of visits to the revamped home is anticipated to significantly increase.

Designed by NIKKA DESIGN and built by Greening Homes Ltd., A Healthy Home will be on display until Dec. 31, 2010. Public tours are available Monday to Friday 6:30 p.m. - 9 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday from noon - 3 p.m.
